

Ahmet Cevik is a research scientist in Mathematics Department of Leeds University. He completed his BSC and MSC in computer engineering departments. His research interests are in computational logic and computational theory. He is also involved in RFID signal databases and calculating the object positions by using computational algorithms.